Presidential aspirants and their parties are now quiet, cautious, and watchful. A nearer approach has perhaps been made to the fusion and confusion of parties than ever before since the Adams and Jackson contest arose. Here, at Washington, it is likely few moves are made by any party, excepting such as are prompted by demonstrations from distant quarters. It is not likely that much light will be cast upon the subject until that luminous body, the next Congress, shall convene. In the mean time the nation will get along pretty well, and the people, if wise enough to think so, will be happy.

Widely as may differ the various systems of governmental policy devised and supported by the statesmen of our country, he, indeed, would be an ingenious schemer who could plan a means of prostrating her energies, or materially thwarting her prosperity. Improvement, progress, increase, mark the history of each successive effort in every field of action; and forests fall, and fields appear, and cities grow, and the avenues of commerce become thronged, so rapidly, that they who contemplate each change as it occurs still behold its accomplishment in wonder and amazement.

The time will come when these things will cease; when the characteristics of youth will no longer be ours; when the policy of our country may no longer be fashioned by the plastic hand of each temporary ruler or legislative director. But that time is far distant, and, ere it come, the way of the American people may often lie through dangers of many kinds. The greatest of these will be the large measure of prosperity enjoyed. The history of the past affords ample proof that this has been so; and no forced interpretation is required to predict it for the future.

How important, then, that the principles upon which we act should be, not of mere expediency, but of wisdom and immutable justice: not based upon poetic reveries, but upon the sage teachings of practical experience! How essential to our permanent welfare that the sentiments of genuine patriotism should be realized, and that the most ardent feelings of fraternity and affection should animate the bosoms of our citizens!

A few brief months have passed since the whose folly and madness had urged them on. and whose conscious dishonor and degradation would forever darken the brows and chill the hearts that should glow in triumph for their country's welfare.

The cloud is past. THE PROPLE OF THE UNION HAVE ARISEN, and even self-immolation cannot conceal in oblivion the unsavory remembrance of the men who have fallen. We will not rejoice in their fall, nor triumph unregrettingly over their defeat; but we will look around upon the vast brotherhood of our countrymen with a glowing breast, and hearken to their voice with a delighted ear, when we remember that no temptation, no trial, is adequate to turn their affections from the broad land that is sheltered by their Constitution, or obliterate from their hearts the fealty they owe to this revered its greatness.

THE TELEGRAPHS.

The Electric Telegraph and the American Telegraph are very different concerns. The former is American, to be sure, but the latter is a quiet, prudent, industrious little journal, that will do good and faithful service without electrifying any body; and yet it is sided very much by its electrical namesake. Whoever will keep his eye on our despatches, will find that we have a summary of all the important news of the country down to a very late hour of the day.

The people of Washington are assured that all the money they may expend with us shall be devoted to the improvement of our paper and the extension of all its facilities.

POLICE MATTERS.

'Squire Smith yesterday issued a warrant for the arrest of Jim Lile, a villanous colored fellow, for making an assault of a brutal character on a girl of his own color. Officer Wollard arrested him, but he fought so fiercely that his resistance brought out another warrant, and, with officer Handy's aid, he was soon put in

Charles Klopkar, a crazy old Frenchman, whom we thought 'Squire Smith had secured for a month a few days ago, was again brought up yesterday to the same functionary, and sent to jail, to await his trial for an assault and riotous conduct at Stultz's tavern, on 9th street. Old Charlie was making a fair attempt to demolish the whole house when arrested.

GOOD ORDER.

Better order has prevailed in the city of Washington for several months past, than has been known here or in any other city for many a day before. The cause should be ascertained and continued. We think the press has done something in the way of exposing and curing evils. Depend upon it the most minute affairs connected with a city's welfare are worth the attention of its newspapers.

THE NEW YORK FIREMEN made good use of their time while here yesterday. They saw

The character of Kossuth is of an exalted kind, and his unsuccessful struggle in behalf of his country against ruthless tyranny has covered his name with imperishable honor:

"Our readers are aware that our Governmen as sent out instructions to our Minister at Constantinople, authorizing him to employ one of the national vessels belonging to the fleet now cruising in the Mediterranean, to convey Kossuth and his companions to the United States, should the Sublime Porte consent to States, should the Sublime Porte consent to grant them their release. From the previous conduct of his Sultanic Majesty, we cannot entertain any doubt of his embracing the offer of our Government, and allowing the exiled Hungarians and Poles, now residing in his dominions, to embark for the United States. Any hesitation or delay on the part of the Sultan would be inconsistent with his previous conduct and promises, and would tend to alienate the good opinious which his public and humans in good opinions which his noble and humane in-terposition on behalf of the refugees has called forth. We therefore think that the Sultan will act up to his promises; and, consequently, we may expect to have the illustrious Kossuth and his patriotic companions in the United States before the close of the coming summer.

"We take it for granted that the refugees will arrive at New York, and that our civic authorities and citizens will give them a glorious reception. This is all very well, but we should consider that they come to our shores as stran-gers, outcasts, poor, and without means to ob-tain the necessaries of life. Now, the parade A few brief months have passed since the horison was dark around us, and the voice of discord was bitter in our councils. We feared not then for the safety of the Republic. We feared not then for its unity. We feared not that a single star would depart from the galaxy, nor that its lustre would pale through the acts of its ignoble sons. But we feared for the men whose folly and madness had urged them on, Po enable them to do this, we would sugges that our common council appoint a committee, with his honor the Mayor as chairman, to receive subscriptions to be devoted to providing suitably for the refugee Hungarians and Poles, mittee that can be formed, and will also be more worthy of our city. By acting thus, we will only be emulating the generous conduct of the Sultan, the conduct of the people of Liverpool, and we will show to the world our estimation of the heroic efforts of a brave people who struggled nobly in the same sacred cause for which our fathers bled and suffered. on their arrival here, and to enable them to settle with their friends in Iowa. # LAUDABLE INGENUITY.

The New York Tribune of yesterday says: Somebody in Bleecker street, who has a house to let, sends us a long account of a visit which he received from a lady and gentleman who pro-fessed to be house-hunters. The lady was very pretty and very much fatigued; the gentleman indifferent and hard to be satisfied. Accordingly the former remained in the parlor to rest, while the latter made the tour of the house, and finally both departed, expressing their great satisfaction. Shortly afterward, several small articles of value were discovered to be missing, and the inference was that the house-hunting visit was adroitly planned for the purpose of

NATIONAL MEDICAL ASSOCIATIONS. The fourth annual meeting of the American Medical Association will be held in Charleston South Carolina, on the first Tuesday, the 6th day of May, 1851. Organized societies through-out the Union are entitled to send delegates. It is thought the Medical Profession will be fully represented in this National Medical Congress. The first session was held in Baltimore in the year 1848; the second in Boston in 1849; the third in Cincinnati in 1850. The sixth annual meeting of the Association

Returning to the city too late for the afternoon train to Baltimore, they were entertained at the United States Hotel, in fine style, by a number of our citizens; and, at a little before ten o'clock at night, departed for Baltimore in an extra train.

Lusus NATURA .- We learn from the Charles ton Chronicle that out of a litter of pige rec born on a farm hear the city, one was ob of a nondescript species, differing materially in form and marks from the rest, of an unusually large size, and with almost all the colors of the rainbow. It is of the Berkshire breed, partly, but most curiously deformed, having nearly two heads entire, with the exception of the nose and mouth, which are not exactly double, but enlarged to far more than the ordinary capacity required for the offices of those members. One ear is longer than the other; the two fore-feet are strangely imperfect, and a dromedary-lik hump on the back is very perceptible.

JENNY LIND. Previous to the departure of this "Queen of Song" from the city of St. Louis, she distributed her usual charities among the different benevolent societies in that place. From the Repub-lican, of the 27th ultimo, in which the corres pondence is published, we learn that both Jenny Lind and Barnun each contributed a thousand dollars, which was distributed as follows by Sun of yesterday, we desire to express our Mr. Kennett, the Mayor, in accordance with

"Permit me, through you, to return my home amongst us, and who are sorely in need of a friend on their first arrival, would I thank Miss Lind and Mr. Barnum for their noble benefaction.'

We notice among the visiters in this city, Dr. Frank Taylor, whose exertions to pro-cure the release of Kossuth will be remembered with pleasure by all Americans and by all Republicans. He went to Asia Minor to meet Kossuth, and traveled hundreds of miles for that purpose. He found Kossuth all that he is represented to be—an accomplished gentleman, a splendid scholar, a statesman, and a soldier; with his heart beating warmly for freedom, and especially for this country. Dr. Taylor was the main influence that secured the passage of the Main influence that secured the passage of the Kossuth resolution, in the last Congress, under the authority of which the President will send a vessel for the Hungarian hero. We are glad to add that the Doctor is a young man, and a native of Chester county, in this State.

> of Twenty-first street and Lexington avenue, the sidewalk is covered with a pool of blood where Fletcher fell. It appears she was waiting for him for an hour previous, and told a young man who was with him to stand back. Fletcher, however, did not see any weapon with her, and when he turned on the sidewalk, to go toward Mr. Lawrence's house, she fired the pistol, and he fell forward on his face, where he lay insensible for some time. She walked deliberately away, and threw the pistol over the fence, where it was found. The shot tool effect just where the neck joins the head, and where the muscles are pretty thick. Fletcher is a fat Englishman, and probably owes his life to the fact, if he should survive this sporting affair. Several doctors of the neighborhood were in attendance and examined the wound. Where the centre of the charge entered there is a round hole, and all around there are small shot holes, for it was with shot the pistol was loaded. Had there been a stronger charge of powder in, or had the woman fired a little high, Fletcher would have been a corpse. As it is his life is in danger.

The doctors ordered a poultice to the wound, but could not extract the shot at present, nor have they as yet ascertained the full extent of the injury. His forehead and face are very badly cut where he fell upon the flags. The woman was handed over to the justice on the charge, but the wounded man is at present unable to appear against her in court. It is said to be an affair of the heart.
